Who hasn't had the opportunity (or perhaps its more of a punishment) to organise a big family celebration? Due to a peculiar family tradition, Lucia, our heroine, is left with no choice but to organise the baptism of her son Argimiro on the idyllic island of El Hierro, the smallest of the Canary Islands. During one manic weekend, not only will she have to contend with her own and her husband's families, but also find out whether her suspicions as to the identity of her son's real father are true or just a misunderstanding. Amusing characters and everyday situations taken to the extreme will leave the reader wondering whether their own family is so strange after all. Guaranteed entertainment. An unmissable book.
