Jota is a journalist and has been awarded a medal for his admirable work. His reality however, could not be further from this image, because as a result of an unfortunate event in his personal life, he is about to endanger not only his career but also his physical and mental health. The one thing he thought he could do - and do with brilliant tenacity - he finds himself unable to carry on with, even with the most meagre competence. The only person he cared about in the world has vanished. While he was going through this catastrophe, his best friend and boss covered his back and this leaves him under an obligation to agree when he asks him to complete a special mission. A mission that will resurrect the Phoenix from the ashes. This chance brings his withered heart back to life, gets him back on his feet; he will both lose and find loved ones on this emotional helter-skelter where poison and pistols are mixed to perfection in this story of...
