Season: SPRING 2011

The Tikis-Mikis were creatures from a bygone age. They were given that name because they spent all day complaining, as if everything bothered them, and the other animals did not dare talk to them. Would they ever change their attitude? This story can be used to teach self-esteem, empathy, integration and teamwork, encouraging children to adopt a positive attitude to life. As well the story, boys and girls will be able to relate words in two languages and give free rein to their imagination by making their own drawings.
