After the death of her mother, Gabriele returns to the village where she spent her childhood summers. Waiting for her there is her father, with whom she has not spoken for years. Together they set out to fulfill Greta's last wish: that the three most important people in her life — her husband, her only daughter, and her sister-in-law — scatter her ashes in a place where they have been happy. Secrets revealed by Greta in the letters she leaves for her family will finally end the silence between father and daughter and, through a domino effect, alter everyone's lives, leading to an unexpected encounter that will help Gabriele discover that life's magic is in vulnerability. What if people's destiny had an invisible thread connecting them with those they need to find? What if life were simply a journey to find them?
